Dear History Detectives,

I'm contacting you regarding a new history programme recently commissioned by the BBC called "The Really Interesting History of Britain".

Our target audience are those people who think history is boring and are not interested in finding out about the past. Our aim is to discover really interesting stories and events from history and turn them into an exciting and informative series of programmes that tell the history of Britain from the Roman Invasions to the end of the 20th Century.

We've always been impressed with your work, especially the research you did for the award winning "Henry VIII" series and the the CBBC "Horrible Histories" programmes.

If you are interested in working with us on "The Really Interesting History of Britain" then we would appreciate your thoughts on the title slides I've sent with this letter and what you think people might be interested in from these periods of history.

I look forward to reading your reply.

Sincerely yours,

Jon Brown
