

Awarded to

THE HISTORY DETECTIVES

By the British Film Institute for

OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTION TO TV RESEARCH FOR THE PROGRAMME:

HENRY VIII: TYRANT OR SAVIOUR?

2010

27 August 2010

DATE

SECRETARY

The History Detectives

Mr P. Stebbings
3 Harcourt Drive
Worthington
W04 3DC

4th July, 2012

Dear Sir / Madam,

I am writing to enquire whether there are any job vacancies at the present time. I have been working in a museum as a history investigator for a number of years and clients have told me many times that I have a calm and professional manner.

I would like a new challenge and for this reason, I am looking for new opportunities and, given my experience, I think that I could be an asset as an employee of the History Detectives.

I have heard a great deal about the way you work: the way you seek the complete truth - whatever that might be. It must be exciting working for a team like that.

Please find attached a copy of my CV for your attention. I do hope you think that I have what it takes!

Yours faithfully,

Peter Stebbings

Olden Times

no.203.078

THE WORLDS OLDEST NEWSPAPER

- since 1879 -

A NIGHT OF AWARDS IN LONDON

Harry Potter (Andrew Radcliffe) smiles for the cameras

A night of stars

From Christina Hendricks to Brad Pitt, the stars were out in force at the BFI awards ceremony.

Amid the celebration of mainstream Danish and American drama, this year's awards attest to the strengths of domestic drama. It's impressive and reassuring to find a mainstream commercial channel such as ITV1 well represented.

Documentaries were also celebrated with big wins for David Attenborough's "Life at the Bottom of the Sea" and the BBC's history series "Henry VIII – Tyrant or Saviour?"

A life time achievement award was awarded to Sir Ridley Scott for his major contribution to the British Film industry with films including: Alien and Blade Runner.

The Harry Potter film series was also recognised with a special award for film excellence accepted by its star, Andrew Radcliffe (left).